THE MUSEUM.

The Hunterian Collection, which forms the basis, and still a large proportion, of the contents of the present Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, was originally arranged in a building which its Founder, John Hunter, erected for it in 1784, behind his house in Leicester Square.

John Hunter died October 16th, 1793, aged 64. By his will he directed his Museum to be offered in the first instance to the British Government, on such terms as might be considered reasonable, and in case of refusal, to be sold in one lot, either to some foreign state, or as his executors might think proper.

In the year 1799 Parliament voted the sum of £15,000 for the Museum, and an offer of it being made to the Corporation of Surgeons, it was accepted on the terms proposed by Government*.

In 1806 the sum of £15,000 was voted by Parliament in aid of the erection of an edifice for the display and arrangement of the Hunterian Collection; a second grant of £12,500 was subsequently voted, and upwards of £21,000 having been supplied from the funds of the College, the building was completed in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, in which the Museum was opened for the inspection of visitors in the year 1813.

In consequence of the large number of additions, this building became too small for the adequate display and arrangement of its contents; and more space being at the same time required for the rapidly increasing Library, the greater portion of the present building was erected, wholly at the expense of the College, in 1835, at a cost of about £40,000, and the Hunterian and Collegiate Collections were re-

* The following are the Terms and Conditions on which the Hunterian Collection, purchased by Parliament, was delivered to the late Corporation of Surgeons; which Corporation having become dissolved, the Members thereof were re-incorporated by Charter, dated the 22nd day of March, 1800, under the Title of The Royal College of Surgeons in London:—

1st. The Collection shall be open Four Hours in the Forenoon of two days every week for Inspection and Consultation of the Fellows of the College of Physicians, the Members of the Company of Surgeons, and Persons properly introduced by them; a Catalogue of the Preparations, and a proper Person to explain it, being at those times always in the Room.

2nd. That one Course of Lectures, not less than twenty-four in number, on Comparative Anatomy and other subjects, illustrated by the Preparations, shall be given every year by some Member of the Company.

3rd. That the Preparations shall be kept in a state of Preservation, and the Collection in as perfect a state as possible, at the Expense of the Corporation of Surgeons, subject to the annual Inspection and Superintendence of the Trustees.

4th. That there shall be a Board of Trustees, to consist of sixteen (increased to seventeen by the Lords of the Treasury in 1856) Members, by virtue of their Public Offices, and of fourteen others, to be appointed, in the first instance, by the Lords of the Treasury, and afterwards to be elected, as Vacancies may happen, by a Majority of the remaining Trustees.

5th. That the Museum shall always be open for the Inspection of all or any of the said Trustees, who are to take care that the Corporation of Surgeons perform their Engagements respecting the said Collection. That a day be appointed for the annual Inspection of the Museum, by the Trustees acting collectively as a Board; and that they are also to have quarterly Meetings, for the transacting of any Business relative to the Museum, and for the filling up of such Vacancies as may happen in the number of the Trustees; and that the Corporation of Surgeons shall engage some Person to officiate as Secretary to the Board upon such occasions, and to issue previous Notices to the Members, in which he is to state particularly whether any Vacancies are to be filled up by new Elections.

arranged in what are now termed the Western and Middle Museums, which were opened for the inspection of visitors in 1836.

Further enlargement of the building having become necessary by the continued increase of the Collection, the College, in 1847, purchased the extensive premises of Mr. Alderman Copeland, in Portugal Street, for the sum of £16,000, and in 1852 proceeded to the erection of the Eastern Museum at the expense of £25,000, Parliament granting £15,000 in aid thereof. The re-arrangement of the specimens was completed, and the additional portion of the building opened to visitors in 1855.

The Hunterian Collection was estimated to consist of 13,682 specimens, distributed under the following heads:—

Physiological Department, or Normal Structures.

Physiological preparations in spirit .....	3745
Osteological preparations .....	965
Dry do. ....	617

Of the additions by which the size and value of the Collection have been so very materially increased since it came into the possession of the College, very many have been at various times presented by Fellows and Members of the College, and other persons interested in scientific pursuits. Among the largest contributions from this source have been the Collection, consisting of 847 specimens, presented in 1811 by Sir William Blizard, and a valuable series of Pathological specimens presented in 1851 by Sir Stephen L. Hammick. At the same time the Council of the College have availed themselves of various opportunities as they have occurred to purchase specimens of interest, especially at the dispersion of private anatomical and pathological museums, as that of Sir A. Lever in 1806, of Mr. Joshua Brookes in 1828, of Mr. Heaviside in 1829, Mr. Langstaff in 1835, Mr. South in the same year, Mr. Howship and Mr. Taunton in 1841, Mr. Liston in 1842, Mr. Walker in 1843, and, deserving of especial mention on account of the great number and value of the specimens acquired, that of Sir Astley Cooper in 1843.

The Histological Collection, of which the 215 Hunterian specimens (prepared by Hewson) constitute the nucleus, was chiefly formed by the late Professor Quekett, with considerable additions by purchase from Dr. Tweedy J. Todd, Mr. Nasmyth, and Professor Lenhossek. It now contains upwards of 12,000 specimens, all arranged and catalogued so as to be readily available for reference.

The superintendence of the Museum is confided by the Council of the College to a Committee of its Members, which Committee has held ten meetings during the past year.

A summary of the progress made in the preservation, arrangement, and augmentation of the Collection will be found in the following Report:—

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CONSERVATOR TO THE MUSEUM COMMITTEE.

(Presented July 2nd, 1866.)

THE history of the Museum during the past twelve months may be considered, as before, under the principal sections into which the Collection is divided.

I. PATHOLOGICAL COLLECTION.

The old preparations are in good order; they have recently been examined, and all those of which the spirit had evaporated or was discoloured, 108 in number, have been remounted. Forty-six new specimens have been added to the series during the year, mostly the gifts of Members of the Council of the College.

II. CALCULI.

Very considerable progress has been made by Mr. Taylor in the analysis of the specimens of Calculi added to the Museum since the publication of the printed Catalogue in 1842. The specimens of this series which, since the last Annual Report, have been exhibited for the first time in their proper places in the series, each with a full description, accompanied by a record of the history in all cases where it could be obtained from the donor, are 161 in number. Of these, 98 have been presented by Mr. H. C. Cutcliffe, 10 by Mr. T. Atchison, 13 by the late Mr. Bransby Cooper (including an example of the extremely rare Xanthic Oxide), 26 by Mr. Luke, and 14 by various other gentlemen. There only remain now for analysis the specimens recently presented by Mr. Hodgson.

III. OSTEOLOGICAL COLLECTION.

The rearrangement of the series of bones contained in the Floor Cabinets in the Eastern Museum, the commencement of which was mentioned in the last Report, has proceeded steadily throughout the year, having been completed in five out of the eight Cabinets. This rearrangement, involving the examination and identification of every specimen with its description in the Catalogue, cleaning and when needed repairing it, and in nearly every case repainting the number, has required an amount of time and labour which can scarcely be appreciated without a knowledge of the previous condition of the specimens. While this was in progress very many specimens contained in the drawers have now for the first time been entered in the interleaved Catalogue, and have thus acquired a permanent position in the Collection.

As part of the same department of work, the Osteological stores in the basement, which accumulated when the crowded state of the Collection (before the addition of the new buildings in 1855) rendered it impossible to exhibit them, are gradually yielding up their treasures to enrich the Museum. The more characteristic specimens are being mounted in the separate series; and the others, when catalogued, are deposited in their respective places, either in the cases or drawers in the Eastern Museum, or in the boxes in the small adjacent room, where they will be readily accessible to the osteological student. However desirable it may be that this work should be brought to a completion, and that the store of uncatalogued (I may almost say unknown, and therefore practically valueless) osteological specimens be either incorporated with the Museum or made otherwise useful, as by exchange or donation to some kindred institution, there are many reasons, which I trust will be understood by the Committee, which render it a work of time. Every individual bone requires a most careful examination and comparison, as there is scarcely a box which does not contain portions of the skeletons of more than one animal mixed together. All must be washed, many of them macerated; and as our means for carrying out these operations, both as regards labour and space, are limited, and moreover frequently encroached upon by the requirements of newly added specimens, it is necessary, in order to avoid confusion, to take a few boxes only at a time, and so to pass successively through the whole series, even though the process may extend over several years.

I have had occasion to refer in previous Reports to several particularly valuable additions to the Museum from this source. I may now specially mention the skeleton of that rare and probably extinct bird, the Great Ank (Alca impennis), of which only three other skeletons are known to exist in Europe, none, I believe I am correct in saying, so perfect as our own. Some of the bones of this valuable Hunterian specimen were already catalogued in the Collection, but without any reference to the remainder being in possession of the College; the examination of the boxes in the store-room during the present year brought to light all the others required to complete the skeleton, with a few unimportant exceptions.

The arrangement and appearance of the osteological specimens in the Eastern Museum has been much improved by a change, made by direction of the Committee, in the pedestals on which the larger skeletons in the body of the room are placed. These have been greatly reduced, especially in their height, and repainted in a colour which shows the skeletons to greater advantage, and contrasts better with the stone floor than the grey-granite colour previously used. The bones formerly deposited in the receptacles within these pedestals have been removed to a more convenient locality in the small adjoining room.

While the alteration in the stands was being effected, all the skeletons have been cleaned for the first time for many years. One of them, that of the Walrus, presented by the present President of the Royal Society, General Sabine, had been at some former period covered so thickly with paint that the surface of the bones was completely concealed. It has recently been taken to pieces, thoroughly cleaned, and rearticulated in an improved attitude. This operation was found to involve quite as much time and trouble as the preparation of a new skeleton; but as it was very nearly perfect, and the difficulties and expense of obtaining another example of this now rare animal might be considerable, it was thought worth while to undertake its restoration to a condition more creditable to the Museum than its former state. This skeleton is mounted upon the plan now generally adopted by the articulator (Mr. James Flower), to which the attention of the Committee was especially directed last year. The head, various regions of the vertebral column, and the limbs are all made independent of each other, thereby giving much greater facility for examination, and also permitting the specimen to be moved or cleaned with much less risk of injury.

Several very important additions to the series of articulated skeletons have been made during the year.

First, both in magnitude and scientific interest, must be mentioned the complete skeleton of the adult Greenland Whale (Balæna mysticetus), the purchase and arrival of which was announced in the Report for the year 1864. It may suffice to repeat here that the animal from which this skeleton was prepared was taken at the Danish colony of Holsteinsborg in South Greenland, in the winter of 1861-62, and that it is the only complete skeleton of this remarkable species which has yet been sent to England, although numbers are annually slain for the commercial value of their "whalebone" and oil, by vessels fitted out from our ports. The skeleton is 45 feet 9 inches long in a straight line, the head being 17 feet. The entire weight of the bones, before mounting, was ascertained to be 2 tons 8 cwt. 73 lbs., of which the cranium weighs 18 cwt. 40 lbs., and the lower jaw-bones 9 cwt. 18 lbs. The process of mounting the skeleton occupied nearly nine months, and was completed at the end of January last. I think I may safely say that the service which the Council of the College has rendered to the promotion of anatomical knowledge by the exhibition of this magnificent and costly specimen in their Museum is highly appreciated by all scientific visitors to the Collection*.

One of the valuable specimens presented last year by Mr. W. L. Crowther of Hobart Town, has been articulated, and is suspended in the Eastern Museum. The "Blackfish," as this animal is called by the South-Sea whalers, is closely allied to the "Grindhval" of the Faroe Islands, or the "Ca'ing Whale" of the North of Scotland. Whether they are identical or not is a question of considerable importance to determine in reference to the geographical distribution of the Cetacea, and one which Mr. Crowther's numerous donations to this Museum will materially aid in elucidating. The skeleton of this animal is of considerable anatomical interest, as presenting an excessive multiplication of the phalanges of the digits, unknown in any other mammal.

* Some notes upon this skeleton will be found in an Appendix to Eschricht and Reinhardt's memoir on the species, one of the Ray Society's publications for the present year.

The skeleton of the Awantibo (Arctocebus calabarensis), a Lemuroid animal from Old Calabar, presented by Mr. Andrew Murray, is at present the only skeleton of the genus known to exist*.

The skeleton of another very rare animal, allied to the last-mentioned, but presenting several remarkable peculiarities of conformation, the Aye-Aye (Cheiromys madagascariensis), has been added during the past year, by purchase.

An interesting discovery was made in the latter part of last year, in the Island of Mauritius, relating to that remarkable bird the Dodo (Didus ineptus), once an inhabitant of that island, but extinct for nearly two centuries. The head and foot were the only parts previously known; and these presented such anomalous characters that much speculation existed among naturalists as to the structure of the other portions of the skeleton. For many years numerous searches have been carried on in various parts of the island, to endeavour to find further remains of this once frequent inhabitant, but hitherto in vain. The curiosity felt upon the subject was at last gratified by the discovery, while draining a marsh, of many bones of numerous individuals, undoubtedly of this species. As a portion of these were sent to this country and offered for sale, we have been enabled to secure, at a moderate cost, some of the most characteristic bones.

The opportunity was also taken of obtaining, at the sale of the collection formed in South Africa by the late Mr. R. Gordon Cumming, a few skulls of important and rare animals from that country, including a remarkably fine head, with the horns, of the White Rhinoceros (R. simus).

The homological series of separate bones in the new upright cases in the Eastern Museum has been considerably developed during the year, and already forms a very conspicuous and attractive feature in the Museum. The number of bones (or, as in the case of the hand and foot, vertebrae, and ribs, groups of bones) now exhibited amounts to 1140. They include an interesting series showing the modifications in the form of the sternal apparatus of birds, 231 in number, nearly all of different genera, and all mounted during the present year. Of these, 97 have been presented by Mr. Philip L. Selater, Secretary of the Zoological Society, 31 by the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, and 14 by Mr. W. K. Parker; 21 were purchased, and the remaining 68 are from the uncatalogued Museum stores.

* The skeleton was prepared from a specimen dissected and described by Professor Huxley in Proc. Zool. Soc., June 1864.

IV. HELMINTHOLOGY.

The commencement of a reorganization of this department of the Museum, by Dr. Cobbold, was mentioned in the last Report. This has been now completed as far as our present materials are available. The 100 specimens described in the old Natural History Catalogue (1830) have been re-mounted, and in many cases redissected; and the number of specimens has been doubled by the incorporation of others, either recently presented or taken from the Museum stores and now for the first time exhibited and catalogued. The excellence of the manner in which they are displayed can scarcely be surpassed; and their utility to the student has been greatly enhanced by the publication of a catalogue, containing the most approved scientific name of every specimen, with its habitat, and origin where known.

V. PHYSIOLOGICAL COLLECTION.

The addition of specimens in spirit to this department, having chiefly in view the increase of preparations illustrating normal human anatomy, has mainly occupied Dr. Pettigrew's attention during the year. Among those now shown to the Committee is an extensive series of very highly finished preparations, exhibiting in an exhaustive manner the disposition of the muscular fibres of the human bladder. The results obtained in the dissection of these specimens have been described by Dr. Pettigrew in a paper read before the Royal Society on the 21st of last June. Besides these, a commencement has been made of a series of preparations showing in a permanent manner the voluntary muscles of the human body, to be followed, if the Committee think it advisable, by others, which will afford a complete exposition in detail of every portion of the body. The amount of time and labour expended in the production of such preparations is very great; and as there are sometimes difficulties in obtaining suitable materials when required, the completion of such a series as is contemplated will occupy several years; but, if carried on as now commenced, this College will be able to show a museum of human anatomy unrivalled by that of any other collection in the world.

I conclude by appending a List of the New Specimens added to the Museum since the last Report*.

W. H. FLOWER,

Conservator.

July 2nd, 1866.

* This List does not include those specimens taken into the Museum from the stores, and exhibited and catalogued during the past year, but only those entirely new to the collection.

THE LIBRARY.

The formation of a regular Library may be said to have commenced in the year 1801, at which time and in succeeding years presentations and bequests of books, often in considerable numbers, were made to the College: the principal donors being Dr. Baillie, Sir Everard Home, Sir Charles Blicke, the widow of Mr. Sharp, Sir Ludford Harvey, Dr. Fleming, Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Long. The Court of Assistants also directed from time to time the expenditure of small sums of money for the purchase of books, and eventually voted a sum of £100 per annum for this purpose. Sir Charles Blicke, in the year 1816, invested the sum of £300, the proceeds of which sum were to be devoted to the same object. Some of the purchases thus made were considerable, as in the cases of the Libraries of Mr. Pitt, Mr. St. Andre, and Sir Anthony Carlisle, and books of importance were added at the recommendation of the Conservator of the Museum and others. In this way a Library of considerable value was gradually accumulated, but it was only accessible to a limited number of persons. In 1827 active steps were taken to render it more generally useful, and with this object catalogues and extensive lists of desirable acquisitions were ordered to be prepared. Large sums of money were also expended during this and the ensuing two years, amounting in the aggregate to nearly £6000. A Librarian was appointed, and in 1828 the Library, then containing 10,500 volumes, was thrown open to members of the College, and all other persons engaged in the pursuit of natural science were freely admitted. This large collection, thus opened, offered great facilities to the studious. By means of extensive additions, the collection was well-nigh complete in works on Medicine and Surgery, both domestic and foreign, whilst it was also very rich in publications relating to the accessory sciences. The transactions of Academies and Societies, and the collection of periodical publications in general, owing to their completeness, and the difficulty with which access can be obtained to this class of literature elsewhere than in large libraries, formed a valuable feature. The maintenance of the Library from that time to the present has involved a very considerable expenditure of the funds of the College. It has been the object of those to whose care it has been confided to ensure the completeness and excellence of the collection, and great facilities of reference have been provided by the preparation of additional catalogues and indexes of subjects. At the present time the Library contains 31,157 volumes, comprising 13,076 works, and 34,373 tracts, pamphlets, and theses.
